Posts Tagged 'unit Today, I spoke with a customer that has purchased two units from my master bedroom to use as walk-in closets in their garage. They need both units complete for October, but would like to be able to finish the project on their own. I am working with the client on planning the finishing details and design specifics, but she would like to know how I prepare the plywood unit for painting? The units are to be painted in a gray base coat and then sealed with a semigloss paint. Our colors of choice are "Prestige", "Viking", and "Cranberry". The client is not opposed to us painting the upper portion of the plywood units as well. What we do before we paint the units is to use sand paper to remove any blemishes. Next, I apply a coating of "two step" wood stain that I mixed at a half-strength, and let it dry for approximately a week. The next step is to apply one of our preferred semi-gloss, lacquers with an "inside-out" paint brush and let dry. This will take approximately 10 days or so. 82138339de
